"Everything about Nicholas Roerich is extraordinary—his versatility, his fecundity, his challenging energy, his mastery over obstacles and barriers, his magnificent achievements. He has been marching through life, a calm creative conqueror, hoisting everywhere his triumphant banner, that of universal, all-unifying, all-ennobling beauty."

—ALEXANDER KAUN.

"Roerich's writing is equal to his best paintings, and I can give no higher praise."

—WILLIAM BEEBE.

"In the clear air of the Himalayas, and in the wide plains of Siberia, in the scant words of sphinx-like lamas . . . Roerich finds that truth, that awakening, that certainty of a great coming which he also feels within himself."

—LILLIAN ROGERS.

FLAME IN CHALICE

Poems by NICHOLAS ROERICH. Translated by MARY SIEGRIST, the well-known American poet. The first collection of Roerich's poetry to appear in book form. Cloth binding, $1.50, add 10c. for postage, outside New York City.

"In all of the poetry of Roerich there is a fullness and expansion of consciousness, a vibration of light and color, a sense of prophecy and ongoing, of search, discovery and fulfillment that is as indissolubly a part of his singing word as it is of the colors and contours of his brush."

—MARY SIEGRIST.
